

As I approach the 7-year anniversary of my daughter's suicide, I have a God who makes sense and a Bible that makes sense. Your book, Classic Christianity, was one of the books God used to penetrate a darkness where I could not be counseled or consoled. I was poised to walk the same pathway to death as my daughter when I heard the still, small voice of God again in those few words of responding to God, coming from the radio through your program, People to People.
